Mass School Killer Stopped

54 Suicidal-led Insurgents Captured

Captain Pedro Rosario's cadre uses Random Actor profile. Arrests 54 suicidal-led insurgents in Iraq over 4 months without firing a shot.

After 9-11: Only U.S. Region, No Bomb Threats

Applying Random Actor intervention, only one region in US doesn't have bomb threats in schools after attacks.

How is this possible?

Most possess the Random Actor profile identified by investigative journalist Dan Korem in the early 1990s – a behavioral profile that even laymen can spot.

Korem also identified a no-nonsense intervention that “takes the wires apart” so that a rage-filled person with the Random Actor traits doesn't “detonate” – and doesn't want to kill. For ten years Korem's strategies have been applied and they work . . . in schools, organizations, neighborhoods, and combat.

“Powerful hope . . . Practical solutions that work. Must reading for every team leader—corporate, government, and education . . . and citizen in the neighborhood.”

– Bob VandePol, President, Crisis Care Network,
Nation's largest crisis responder

“Dan Korem's strategies save lives.

I used them in Iraq to protect those in my charge and even the lives of over fifty insurgents who wanted to kill and be killed.”

– Captain Pedro Rosario, U.S. Armed Forces
Bronze Star with Valor recipient
